Jefferson College Speech & Theatre Departmental Philosophy

The Speech & Theater department at Jefferson College emphasizes involvement of students regardless of major or area of interest. Students are given opportunities in acting or technical theater, such as set construction and design, lighting, sound, costuming and make-up.

The department encourages all students, at any talent and experience level, to participate in productions and related classes. An effort is always made to provide each student with the opportunity to play a variety of leading and supporting roles. If students aren't cast in a particular production, they are still encouraged to participate in the production in a technical capacity, offering them a chance to experience firsthand the collaborative nature of the theater event.

It is the policy of Jefferson College that no person shall, on the basis of age, ancestry, color, creed, disability, national origin, race, religion or sex, be subject to discrimination in employment or in admission to any educational program or activity of the College.

Please note: If accommodations for a disability are needed, please contact Beth Ferguson at 789-3951/942-3000, ext. 168.

Synopsis

Beth Henley was born in Jackson, Mississippi and studied drama at Southern Methodist University in Dallas. She started her career as an actress but began writing plays by the time she reached 30. Her other plays include Am I Blue?, The Miss Firecracker Contest, and The Wake of Jamey Foster.

Her first play, Crimes of the Heart won Ms. Henley critical acclaim in 1981 in an unprecedented way. Crimes of the Heart was awarded both the Pulitzer Prize and the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for 1981 before it opened on Broadway. The play was originally produced at the Louisville Actors Theatre in Kentucky, where it was the co-winner in 1979 of the Great American Play Contest. It was subsequently seen in regional theaters in California, St. Louis, Baltimore, and New York prior to its opening on Broadway in November 1981.

The Pulitzer Committee's citation described Crimes of the Heart as "a play rich with wisdom about the way people respond to life." Many critics compare her southern gothic humor to the work of Eudora Welty and Flannery O'Connor. Henley compassionately portrays this bizarre family dealing the underlying horrors of small-town life.

Reviews

Edith Oliver (The New Yorker) calls Crimes of the Heart "a comedy of private disasters among three sisters in Hazelhurst, Mississippi. . . The sisters—walking wounded, who are in tears one moment and giggling and hugging at the next, ordering birthday cake and making lemonade—are very much of the South, of Mississippi. . ."

Scott Haller (Saturday Review) says of Henley's play, ". . . she has populated the household with bizarre characters. In effect, she has mated the conventions of the naturalistic play with the unconventional protagonists of absurdist comedy. It is this unlikely dramatic alliance, plus her vivid Southern vernacular, that supplies Henley's idiosyncratic voice."

Walter Kerr (New York Times) says, "Given the giggling and the wailing that overtakes the girls regularly, it is a bit as though William Faulkner had tried his hand at writing Little Women."

About the Play. . .

Hazelhurst, Mississippi, "five years after Hurricane Camille," is the setting for the McGrath sisters' reunion. They have come together after Babe, the youngest, has shot her husband because she didn't like his looks. Lenny, the oldest, is celebrating her 30th birthday without much hope for the future or consolation about her present circumstances. Meg, the middle child, returns after failing to launch a Hollywood singing career. Hovering above them is the spirit of their mother who hung herself in the basement because she was having a really bad day.

As the story unfold we witness the sisters coming to an understanding about themselves and each other. . . .

The Cast

Lenny Magrath, 30, the oldest sister Melissa Newell
 Chick Boyle, 29, the sisters' first cousin Mamie Overstreet
 Doc Porter, 30, Meg's old boyfriend Jason Christ
 Meg Magrath, 27, the middle sister Erinn Gavaghan
 Babe Botrelle, 24, the youngest sister Trudy Bequette
 Barnette Lloyd, 26, Babe's lawyer Jason Pierce

Directed by Jane Sullivan

The Setting

The setting of the entire play is the kitchen in the Magrath sisters' house in Hazelhurst, Mississippi, a small southern town.

The Time

In the fall; five years after Hurricane Camille.

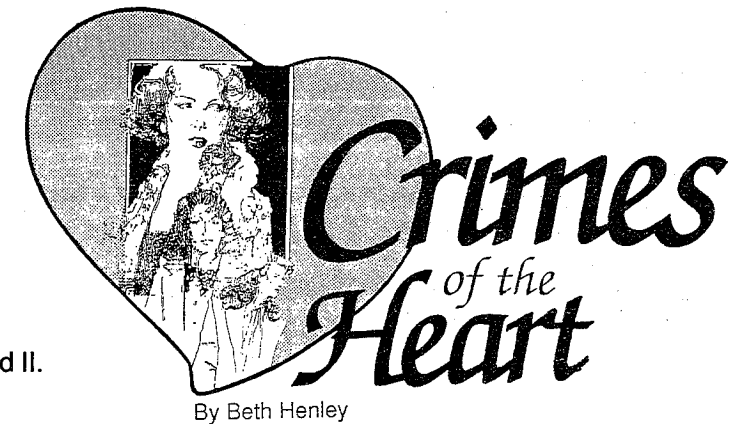

Intermission

There will be a ten minute intermission between Acts I and II.
